- Can we interpret the data?
  - What do the fields mean?
  - What is the key? The measures?
- Data glitches
  - Typos, multiple formats, missing / default values
- Metadata and domain expertise
  - Field three is Revenue. In dollars or cents?
  - Field seven is Usage. Is it censored?
    - Field 4 is a censored flag. How to handle censored data?

Distributional Outliers

- For each point, compute the maximum distance to its k nearest neighbors.
  - DB(p,D)-outlier : at least fraction p of the points in the database lie at distance greater than D.
- Fast algorithms
  - One is $O(dN^2)$, one is $O(c^d+N)$
- Local Outliers : adjust definition of outlier based on density of nearest data clusters.

training materials. The result: after rationalizing the process of content creation, the company now meets 97% of its deadlines, compared to 63% before corrections. 6. Acknowledging processes based on "Your team used to do everything internally" from website development to content creation to social media management," says Calloway Cook, president of Illuminate Labs, a dietary supplement manufacturer. "We realized that some of the business processes we were taking were inefficient because we were not experts in those areas." For example, some members of his team could perform some development elements of the website. However, since they had no skill construction in that area- not to mention other responsibilities that had development tasks would take too long, regardless of how they had changed the process. Cook decided to hire a contract developer and adapt their process to reflect using an external resource. "We have followed this approach to other disciplines, such as graphic design and paid ads, with equally desired results. The result: Cook's team had more time to focus on working areas within their combined skills and he was able to resize the business faster. 7. Revision of business processes Eric Mills, CEO of ESPORTS Accessory Brand Pro Support Accessory, shares an example of "one of the most significant improvements" that he has brought to his organization: company transition to collaborative tools at work. Mills states that his business is extremely dependent on the different departments working together - in particular customer service,Product production and development. That's why the company needed to improve communication and collaboration processes. After looking for the market, he landed on an instrument that found the best solution. The result: the company departments are more synchronized, communication is seamless, continuity, Employees are more easy from board and requires less efforts to improve business processes.
